How to use Electronic SuperSpeed Rhymes

Electronic SuperSpeed Rhymes (ESR) contains 207 words representing 31 of the largest, rhyming word families in English (see slides 11-13 for a complete list). ESR can be used from pre-kindergarten through elementary school, wherever students need to improve reading fluency. Mastery of rhyming words is a powerful aid in developing phonics and literacy skills.

An unusually rich, language development program, ESR also helps students with reading sentences, answering questions, comparison and contrast, critical thinking, and even speaking short paragraphs.

A key feature of ESR is that it is "open architecture" and is easily customizable by adding, deleting, or rearranging slides Thus, if you wish, you can add additional rhyming words or entire word families.

ESR is easy to use. Load the program on a computer's hard drive and project the words onto your classroom's screen. Page through the words, while your students read them aloud.

PowerPoint Games

A variety of games are possible using the PowerPoint slides in this program:

- -- See how many words your class can read in one, two or three minutes.
- -- Page through the words slowly, then quickly, then slowly, as if the class is on an roller coaster.
- -- Go forward, then unexpectedly backward.
- -- Make copies of words your class has problems with and insert these copies at unexpected places in the sequence.
 - -- Count your students off in 1s, 2s, 3s, 4s and then give each group turns in reading rhyming words.
- -- Pit boys against the girls, or the left side of the classroom against the right, to see who can read a sequence of words the most quickly.
 - -- Play "Quiet Riot" in which students alternately whisper and shout words.
 - -- Modify the program to your students' needs; add "bonus" rhyming words or word families,
 - -- Use the program as a stand alone reading exercise that students use on individual computers.

To add even more fun, add your own narration to ESR (amplify the roller coaster theme).

- "Ah, slow section coming up ... read slooooowly!" Page through the slides slowly.
- "Oh, no! Almost to the top! Quick dip ahead!" Suddenly increase the speed of your slide flipping.
- "Right turn! Everybody lean right!" Your whole class leans right as they shout the rhyming words.
- "Hands up and shriek in this next scary section!" Your kids shriek with their hands up as they master rhyming words.

Phonics Decoder

Phonics Decoder significantly simplifies the problem of sounding out words for beginning readers. Every rhyme word in ESR is printed in two colors. The initial phonics sound is printed in blue; the concluding sound is printed in black:

thin, chin, win, fin, pin

Ask your kids to "say the blue letters ... then the black letters." This will lead them to divide the word into the simplest phonics components. In addition, seeing the same stem repeated in black letters will increase their speed of word identification. Several exercises are possible with Phonics Decoder:

- -- You say the blue letters; your kids say the black letters.
- -- Half your class is the "Starters": the other half of the class is the "Finishers". Starters say the blue letters; Enders say the black letters.
- -- Page quickly through the words, asking kids to only say the blue letters.
- -- After one rhyme is identified, ask kids to think of other rhyme words "with different blue letters."

Word List Games

Doubles SuperSpeed

Paste the list of SuperSpeed Rhyme words on slides 11-13 into a Word program, increase the font size and give each student in your class a copy. Divide you kids into pairs of weaker and stronger readers. Each pair reads as fast as they can for one minute to set a team record. Juan reads the first word, Mary reads the second word, Juan reads the third word, Mary reads the fourth word and so forth. Helpsies is encouraged. If Mary doesn't know a word, Juan tells her. At the end of a minute, the team circles the last word they read. Next, the team gets a second try. Oh, they must break their team record! But this time, since Juan went first, Mary goes first (thus, each player will have a chance at all the words.) If the team breaks their record on the second try, then the next time they play, they get to start one line down. Thus, if they started on line 1 and broke a team record, the next time they play they start on line 2. In this way, the team gradually works through all the rhyme words. We have never found any academic activity that motivates students more than setting and breaking records.

Singles SuperSpeed

Follow the same procedure as above, except that first one player, Juan, reads all the words (with Mary coaching and giving helpsies). Then Juan gets to try again. His goal is to break his singles record (Mary still coaches and gives helpsies). Mary then gets two tries for her personal record (with Juan coaching and offering help). When players break personal records in Singles Superspeed, then the next time they play, just as in Doubles SuperSpeed, they start one line down from their previous beginning point.

Overview

Each sequence of rhyming words follows the same order. The first slide highlights one word in the word family.

This slide gives students a chance to think and respond on their own. Encourage children to tell each other as many answers as possible to the question before you ask for volunteers. When students are teaching their neighbors, there is much more learning going on than when you select one student to respond. The next slide in the sequence presents the rhyme word illustrated by a question.

At this point you have several choices.

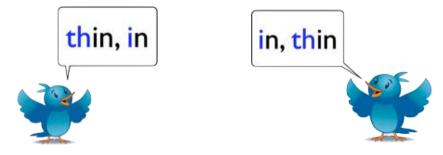

- -- students can read the the word as a group
- -- students can tell each other the word
- -- students can read the sentence as a group
- -- students can read the sentence to each other
- -- students can read the sentence to each other and answer the question

Whenever you are asking students to work together, it is a good idea to pair your kids into stronger and weaker readers (just as in the SuperSpeed games). Identify them as "Is and 2s", "peanut butter and jelly" or any other name. Next, give each member of the pair a task, "Is read and 2s echo" or "2s read and Is answer." This ensures that all your students get equal opportunities to participate.

The next slide in the sequence presents the next rhyming word.

At each slide, you have the same sequence of choices described above. Initially, it is probably a good idea to simply page through the slides, asking the class as a whole to quickly read the rhyme word (with or without your prompt). After every two rhyming words, the previous words are repeated as follows.

The same pattern is followed for all the words in the rhyming family. The number of words in each sequence ranges from six to ten, depending upon the importance of the stem (ing, in, ine) in reading.

At the end of each word family, all the words are grouped together in a poem.

Finally, the sequence concludes by repeating the beginning question. This slide is an excellent opportunity for students to review with their neighbors.

Phonics

In addition to increasing student reading speed and fluency ESR can also be used to teach crucial phonics skills. When students are able to read a sequence of rhyme words fairly well, simply ask them to focus on the beginning sound, the blue letters. For example, instead of reading "thin," they should say "th"; instead of reading "wing" they should say make the "w" sound. As mentioned earlier, an especially entertaining game divides the class into Starters and Finishers. The Starters read the blue letters; the Finishers add the rest of the word, the black letters.

Question Answering

Every word in ESR is illustrated by a question.

- -- What is in the basket?
- -- Is the basketball player fat or thin?
- -- Do you love to win?

These questions can be used in several ways:

- -- Students can ask and answer the questions with each other.
- -- You can pose the question and students can tell each other the answer.
- -- After the students have learned the words, you can simply zip through the slides and give students rapid practice in answering questions, giving reasons for their answers, using "because," etc.
- -- Students can read the questions aloud and create "air punctuation," raising one hand above the other to indicate capital letters, shrugging their shoulders to indicate question marks.

Initially, many of your students will probably respond to the questions with one word answers. As they gain experience with replying, encourage them to answer with two or three sentences. In essence, you are teaching your kids to speak short paragraphs with the first sentence as a topic sentence.

Stress one major point in all question answering. The students must use the rhyme word in their answers!

Critical Thinking

The word "because" is central to thinking critically. When we use "because" in a sentence, we are offering evidence to support a conclusion.

- -- I like apples because they are good for me.
- -- Learning phonics is important because it helps students decode words they haven't seen before.
- -- Teaching is a great job because you change lives.

Here are some prompts that you can use with ESR to help students use "because".

- -- "Tell your neighbor as many sentences as you can that use [substitute a rhyme word] and 'because' in a sentence."
- -- "Tell your neighbor if you like or don't like the picture that goes with [substitute a rhyme word] and use the word 'because' in your explanation."
- -- "Tell your neighbor why two words we've read are alike and use the word 'because' in your answer."
- -- "Tell your neighbor why two words we've read are different and use the word 'because' in your answer".

Comparison-Contrast

Comparing and contrasting are key intellectual tasks, important from kindergarten through college. Use Electronic SuperSpeed Rhymes to help your students develop this skill. Ask pairs of students to discuss with each other any of the following questions:

- -- How are [substitute two rhyme words] alike?
- -- How are [substitute two rhyme words] different?
- -- What two words have you read that are the most alike?
- -- What two words have you read that are the most different?
- -- The word [substitute a rhyme word] begins with the sound [make the sound]. What are other words, that don't rhyme with that word, that start with the same sound?
- -- The word [substitute a rhyme word) begins with the sound (make the sound). What are other words, that don't rhyme with that word that start with a different sound?
